Across the street from Twentyone24, Este is the next building to be added to the growing list of hip, mixed use projects in East Austin. Este combines ground floor pedestrian-friendly commercial space located along Sixth Street with three levels of residential lofts above. The structure is all steel with concrete tilt-wall and a recycled brick veneer from Chicago. “Este”, Spanish for east, replaces the former East End Lumber Co., and provides 67 condominiums along with a restaurant on the ground floor—providing revitalization for an area that has long been forgotten.
